THE THREE SCAPEGRACES.

These are the three children of W. S. Ritch—Jean, Harold and Clarette—listening to a funny story.

HERE ARE TWO FIGHTERS.

The little two-pound bantam in the picture, being the undisputed monarch of the yard for a long time, objected to the newcomer, a six-pound game rooster. Undaunted by his opponent's size, he attempted to maintain his rights, but after a short and furious argument, he has decided to play second fiddle.

WILD PLUNGE TO HIS DEATH.

Merrigan, Fearing Arrest, First Cut Wrists and Throat.

Thomas Merrigan sat in his room, No. 203 East Sixty-third street, this morning and cut the arteries in his wrist and throat.

After waiting impatiently for the death that was long in coming, he opened the window and plunged forty feet to the sidewalk.

The body was discovered by Policeman Thomas Moen, Jr., who was returning from his post on Second avenue to the East Sixty-seventh street station. When taken to the station the wounds in the wrists and throat were found and Sergeant Quilly suspected murder.

A closer inspection of the body showed that the ankles were broken. The window on the fourth floor was open. Inside the room a dull knife and pools of blood showed that Merrigan had committed suicide.

Merrigan was forty-eight years old. He separated from his wife a few years ago and had sent money to her regularly since with the understanding that she was not to have him arrested if the remittances failed. Having been out of work for several weeks he was unable to continue sending money, and his friends say that the fear of arrest led to his suicide. He had boarded with a family named Adams at No. 203 East Sixty-third street, for several months.
